Reading and Writing the Orton-Gillingham Way: Perfect Together!

Tuesday, November 10, 2015
9:00 a.m. - 4:00 p.m.
In person or online

The process of writing is related to the process of reading: both involve constructing or composing meaning.

Participants will explore the structure of grammar and techniques for enhancing the writing of sentences, paragraph types, and the essay. The course will also introduce mapping and outlining strategies that students can utilize in the comprehension of fiction and non-fiction text. In addition, strategies for vocabulary development in the content areas will also be reviewed. Participants will be shown techniques for incorporating students’ growing vocabulary into new reading and writing opportunities that match the common core requirements. Actual, hands-on strategies will be presented, and can be easily recreated into the elementary, middle school, and high school curriculum.

Presenter: David G. Katz
Fellow, Academy of Orton-Gillingham Practitioners and Educators

Syllabus
LearningAlly.org/OGread

Payment
Credit card or P.O.
Members: $69
Non-members: $89

Where
Online: take the workshop anywhere you have a computer and internet access or
In person: join us at 20 Roszel Road, Princeton, NJ 08540

Questions, Registration and Payment
Contact Debbie at 609-243-5855 or dByrne@LearningAlly.org

Learning Ally
Together It’s Possible